The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 26-28, 33-34 and 40-42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chancey et al. ('185).

The reasons for this rejection were set forth in the office action of March 2, 2000, and are hereby incorporated by reference.

Claims 29-32, 36-39 and 43-46 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chancey et al. ('185) in view of Quicken 5 for Windows as evidenced by Cummings in the book Home Banking With Quicken.

The reasons for this rejection were set forth in the office action of March 2, 2000, and are hereby incorporated by reference.

Remarks

Claims 29-32, 36-39 and 43-46 as rejected under 35 USC 103 as being obvious in view of Chancey et al.:

Applicant's arguments pertaining to this rejection have been considered but are not well taken. Applicant's primary argument is that Chancey et al. does not disclose the concept of changing the payee name. Although the office action of March 2, 2000 does state that the combined actions of changing the payee name and linking it to a preferred name are an obvious variation of Chancey et al., applicant's argument appears to be that Chancey et al. does not suggest changing the payee name at all. These arguments are found to be incorrect. Chancey et al. explicitly states that the payee name can actually be changed. In particular, Chancey et al. states (col. 5, lines 30-33):

With the statement displayed, the user may mark a transaction for further review with a “?”, check and change categories, change the payee or the like.” (Emphasis added).

Chancey et al. explicitly discloses the feature of changing the payee name. While the focus of the description appears to be on changes in the category name, Chancey et al. does in fact allow for changes in the payee name as an alternative, and states this very clearly in the above quotation.

Claims 29-32, 36-39 and 43-46 under 35 USC 103 as being obvious in view of Chancey et al. (‘185) in view of Quicken 5 for Windows as evidenced by Home Banking with Quicken.

Applicant’s arguments pertaining to this rejection have been considered but are not well taken. Applicant argues that the reference to Cummings does not disclose or recite the features of claim 29. However, the office action of March 2, 2000 discusses these features in claim 29, and points to specific pages in the Cummings reference which discuss the claimed features. In particular, pages 83-89 of Cummings discloses a reconciliation process involving sequentially presented, dated transactions which are used in the reconciliation process. Applicant’s argument that Cummings does not disclose any of the features of claim 29 does not consider the teachings provided in pages 83-89 of the Cummings reference.

Applicant’s arguments pertaining to claims 27, 28, 30, 30, 31, 32, 34, 35, 37, 38, 39, 41, 42, 44, 45 and 46 are highly generic, and do not address any of specific bases for obviousness raised by the Examiner in the office action of March 2, 2000, or the reasons for obviousness provided.
